From rhetoric to reality: Nearshoring in the Americas

Over the past five years, global shifts have reshaped the world. China's rise, US-China tensions, COVID-19, and Russia's 2022 invasion of Ukraine exposed supply chain vulnerabilities, pushing resilience to the top of the agenda. Latin America and the Caribbean (LAC) can seize the opportunity to provide solutions for US companies through nearshoring.

After Venezuela's stolen election, here's how the US should craft an effective sanctions policy

As Venezuela's political crisis worsens, the United States has a role to play in advancing the country's democratic cause and also inflicting pain on the Maduro regime, while minimizing negative impacts on Venezuelans, the broader region, and US interests. This will require crafting a smart sanctions policy based on lessons learned and five key elements.

Summit of the Future: a global deal to reshape future governance

The United Nations Summit of the Future: Multilateral Solutions for a Better Tomorrow, takes place on September 22nd and 23rd, 2024. It promises to adopt a "Pact for the Future" whose goal is to act as catalyst to reinvigorate the organisation and adapt it to a new geopolitical reality. Discussions will be conditioned by factors such as China's consolidation as an assertive power with worldwide reach, or the emergence of a Global South that questions the geopolitical order of a globalisation fashioned to suit Western powers and which perpetuates inequality and dependency. There is criticism of the lack of representation in the decision-making bodies that shape global governance from states and regions that feel sidelined, as well as...

This paper presents an analysis of the internationalisation of intermediate cities in Buenos Aires Province, Argentina. Framed in the field of the paradiplomacy studies, it takes a critical stance on the use of the concept and returns to alternative theoretical-methodological tools, such as subnational international policy and the international participation index. Taking a quantitative-qualitative approach, it notes a significantly higher internationalisation profile of these cities recently, with increasing levels of institutionalisation and a pre-eminence of unilateral and bilateral strategies. The originality of the work lies in its focus on a realm that has received relatively little attention in the speciality in Latin America, and in the study of general trends, going beyond the single case studies that dominate the field.
